

Commissioning your Portrait

Portraiture entails two separate but related services. The consultation, portrait session and preparation of an audio-visual presentation is the first service. The second consists of completing the finished portraits, mounting, finishing and framing.

Your portrait commission begins with a consultation to discuss and agree upon the mood, the size and the background of the portrait. The clothing, setting and where the portrait will hang are also discussed. Each portrait is carefully thought out with careful insight about the personality of the subjects. This consultation is best done in person, but can be done over the phone or by e-mail. Products, policies and pricing will be discussed. Your portrait session fee is due at this time.

Your portrait session may be in our studio, outdoor location or your home. Please arrive on time. If you are late you will have less camera time. Any portrait minimums are due at this time.

About one week after your session we will schedule a projection sales session at our studio. Your images will be projected on a 70" screen. All decision makers should be present. You will need to provide childcare so as to give your full attention to decision making. Consider your portrait product needs before this session. Additional projection sessions require a fee for the time involved.

Once placed, your order should be ready for delivery in about three to four weeks. Framed prints and albums may take additional time. Your portraits are delivered with complete satisfaction.
